

4 Step Game Plan

For Homeschooling Kids During COVID-19

Consider these four elements when creating a plan for your day.

- Identify all adult activities.
Consider work, leisure, household, social, and parenting activities.
Determine level of adult availability for each activity.
- Identify all child activities.
Consider school, chores, social, family, and free-time activities.
Determine level of child independence for each activity.

- Block out “un-negotiables.”
Block out time for all “must dos” for the day for parents and kids.
- Align compatible parent and child tasks.
Plan low parent availability with high child independence.
Plan high parent availability with low child independence.

- What does your child need in order to do their best work?
Don't assume you know the answers to this question. Get very curious. Ask your child what they need or what gets in their way.
- Some areas to think about:
Location, sounds/noise level, lighting, movement, visual distractions, line of sight for monitoring

- Adapt the activity
Incorporate strengths, interests, past successes, make accommodations.
- Make it matter
Attach value. Set up a system for your child to earn things.
